Also, one of the stockbrokers I called into in Dublin, after I explained that I was looking for a diversified balanced portfolio, recommended that I put half my money into a property in Germany, and the other half into only Irish stocks! I could only laugh to myself. I wonder if the property was part of the same vehicle, Dolphin Capital, mentioned in the article? My advice, don't give these firms discretionary authority over your assets, only non-discretionary. Discretionary authority risks churning, that is, excessive trading in a client's account mainly to generate commissions...sound familiar! How about renaming the article Davy, Dolphin & Greensill: Lessons from 20 years ago...
