You don't need high tech to do the right thing Mr. Murphy. Practice what you preach! I referred to my experience with the Law (Solicitors) Society of Ireland in my Reports (first report, starting p. 51 on my Failte 32 U.S. website) when trying to hold the Irish Government accountable for fraud effectively under a program called Innovation Fund Ireland (IFI). I tried to contact Ken Murphy multiple times even having been referred to him by two statutory bodies, the Citizen's Information Board and the European Ombudsman. I did not receive a reply from him or the Society, not even some minimal direction. I subsequently tried to lodge a formal complaint against multiple Irish law firms through the Law (Solicitors) Society but to no avail (see my update Report, p. 194 on Failte 32). The legal profession in Ireland as regards holding the Irish Government accountable for its crimes, and they are crimes, is deplorable. We don't need any more talk Mr. Murphy...

If you could all (Law Society and Bar Council) just deliver our deeply Anglocentric legal system* into this 21st century European republican state that would be a much-appreciated start, lads.
